Lewis Wesner Dead.

Lewis Wesner, well known here for years as a steamboat man in the engine department, is dead. He passed away at Philadelphia after an illness that first manifested itself here some two years ago. Wesner was a man under forty, was a master of his trade and was well liked by all who knew him. While in the inter-island service here he was a general favorite. Before that he was with the Oceanic company. The death of Mr. Wesner, which occurred over two months ago, will be deeply regretted by the many men who were intimate with him here.

Has a Good Reputation.

Why did some of the greatest mechanical schools in this country demonstrate by scientific tests that a higher standard of officiency is obtained with a Sterling bicycle than with any other put in competition with it?

Why did not the Sterling show appreciable wear after being ridden 38,-000 miles? In doing this the wheels rotated in their bearings twenty-five million times. When the Sterling Mfg. Co. began manufacturing the Sterling bleyele, they determined to build a wheel that would insure permanence of their business; that would make a reputation of itself, knowing the "treasure of modern times is spotless reputation," A reputation for good judgment, for CLEVELAND BICYCLES FOR REST fair dealing, for truth, and for rectitude, is itself a fortune. If you want a wheel that contains the finest material and workmanship, and whose reputation is established, call upon the Pacific Cycle & Mfg. Co. and see the new 99 model Sterling, price $60.00.
